

NATIONAL GRADUATE INSTITUTE
FOR POLICY STUDIES

GRIPS 2020–2021

Gateway to Global Leadership

Message from the President

The National Graduate Institute for Policy Studies (GRIPS), a graduate school established in 1997, aims to contribute to the development and advancement of democratic governance both in Japan and abroad through research and education in governmental policy and policy reform. Since its inception as the Graduate School of Policy Science at Saitama University in 1977, GRIPS has conducted policy research relevant to the current affairs of Japan and the world and has provided graduate education in advanced policy studies designed primarily for mid-career administrative and government officials from Japan and overseas, mainly from developing countries. At GRIPS we place particular emphasis on education for our international students; many of our degree programs can be obtained through study entirely in English.

GRIPS endeavors to produce young policy-makers who can tackle problems faced by countries, cities, international organizations, companies, and civil society at large. To that end, graduate education at GRIPS focuses on the fundamentals of policy research as well as practical problem-solving. The students benefit from high-quality instruction in a comprehensive array of subjects, particularly economics, political science, public administration, international relations, and engineering. They also have the opportunity to acquire a valuable set of data science skills. Leveraging GRIPS' location in Japan, we have formed our curriculum around the examination of selected case studies reflecting the experiences of Japan and other Asian countries related to modernization, rapid economic growth, and disaster management.

In fiscal 2020, we launched the Global Leadership Development Program and Science, Technology and Innovation Policy Program, a two-year master's program that allows students to obtain a degree entirely through classes held at night and on Saturdays. If you have a desire to study with us, but find it difficult to free yourself for daytime weekday lectures, we encourage you to apply for this course.

GRIPS' current policy on education, research and management is strongly linked to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 2015. Our curriculum highlights the 17 goals of the SDGs: we work to raise awareness and knowledge of the SDGs amongst our students—many of whom will go on to become leaders of their countries. I am also keen on encouraging research that will contribute to the achievement of the SDGs.

Currently, international students make up 60% of our student population. Even by global standards, we are a particularly international research and education institution. In this environment, international students have the opportunity to engage in friendly competition among themselves and with the people who will lead Japan in the future. On the other hand, our Japanese students have the chance to create bonds with people from around the globe who will go on to be leaders in their home countries.

In this global atmosphere, we particularly welcome Japanese applicants to the English program. We also place strong emphasis on improving the English of the students in the Japanese program, and encourage them to participate in classes conducted in English. As well, we provide English classes and other learning opportunities in the Center for Professional Communication (CPC). For international students, the CPC provides Japanese classes and related learning opportunities, notably through the center's programs for rich exposure to elements of Japanese culture.

GRIPS is centrally located in Tokyo and has extensive access to the Japanese government and its agencies and to other major stakeholders. This proximity allows our students to observe important Japanese policymaking action closely as they conduct their research.

In addition to high-quality graduate education, we offer training programs that meet the needs of various stakeholders, including the government agencies of a wide array of countries; we also accept funded research that draws on our faculty's expertise.

The world in the 21st century is facing a great number of urgent issues that require action on both national and international scales. These issues, reflected in the SDGs, impact on areas including economic development, security, the environment, population, health and hygiene, equality, and technological progress. In particular, the pandemic of a new coronavirus poses unprecedented policy challenges for countries and the international community. GRIPS will continue to conduct research addressing these issues, and to nurture policy professionals who are motivated and equipped to take on global challenges.

Akihiko Tanaka
President

Profile

Akihiko Tanaka obtained his Ph.D. in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1981 and has held various positions at the University of Tokyo, including Professor of International Politics, Director of the Institute of Oriental Culture, and Executive Vice-President. He served as President of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) from April, 2012, to September, 2015. Professor Tanaka's academic specialties include theories of international politics, development cooperation, contemporary international relations in East Asia, and Japanese foreign policy. In 2012, he received the Medal of Honor with Purple Ribbon (shiju hashō) for his academic achievements. In April 2017, Professor Tanaka became President of GRIPS.

Meet Policy Professionals from Around the World

Many students at GRIPS are mid-career personnel from central and local government, related institutions and private companies. About 60% of the student body is composed of international students from nearly 50 countries and regions, many of whom are administrative officials in their own countries.

Our students have diverse nationalities, cultures, and languages, but they are all dedicated policy professionals. GRIPS is an environment where Japanese and international students can address the same problems in the same classroom, thinking about future policy from a global perspective.

GRIPS attracts students from around the world in a variety of fields. Networks established during study are precious assets after graduation. Our graduates number over 5,000 and hail from 122 different countries and regions, including those from GRIPS's predecessor, the Graduate School of Policy Science (GPS) at Saitama University.

Center for Professional Communication

The mission of the Center for Professional Communication is to support GRIPS' students, faculty, and staff in developing effective professional communication skills and competencies needed to communicate productively in an environment of multiple stakeholders. To that end, we offer a range of instruction and support in fundamental areas of professional communication in English and Japanese including policy paper writing, professional speaking, grant proposal writing, and digital communications. We also provide opportunities for cultural and academic exchanges through a self-access learning center, organize seminars and special events related to all aspects of professional communication, and prepare customized materials for students and staff on academic and professional writing and language learning.

Focused Knowledge of Policy Studies

Located in Roppongi, Tokyo, the GRIPS campus is close to Nagatacho and Kasumigaseki, the political and administrative centers of Japan respectively, making it easy for current administrative officers and practitioners to visit. Through lectures, seminars, the GRIPS Forum and other events, students have the opportunity to deepen their knowledge of policy studies by hearing from top-class experts on the front lines of domestic and international academia, government, politics and industry.

Soukairou Hall

Diversity and Depth of Teaching

Our faculty consists of leading scholars in policy studies from Japan and overseas, and highly gifted individuals with practical experience in government, international development and related fields. Together, they make a team of instructors with great diversity and depth. We have more than 70 full-time and many part-time professors to our approximately 350 students. The curriculum includes discussions and tutorial classes with a small number of students, alongside regular lectures. Instruction is closely attuned to the needs of the individual student.

Short-Term Executive Training

Based on experiences of short-term training of Executive Government Officials, GRIPS established the Executive Development Center for Global Leadership (CGL) in 2013. CGL provides various short-term training programs for government officials, particularly in senior executive level and middle management level, in response to specific requests from respective governments.

» Subjects of Short-Term Executive Training Program include:

- Leadership Development and Management for the 21st Century
- Public Management in General
- Structures and Processes of Government
- Organization Management
- Civil Service Systems and Human Resource Management
- Tools of Government
- Legal Systems and Legislative Review
- Administrative Reform and Innovation
- Good Governance
- Trust in the Government
- Ethics and Anti-Corruption
- Local Governance in General
- Local Government Administration
- Local Government Financial Administration
- Management of Inter-Governmental Relations
- Public Policy Analysis
- Selected Substantive Policies

» Short-term training programs consist of various activities:

- Lectures by distinguished professors from GRIPS and from other universities, government officials, business executives and research experts
- Field trips to government agencies and other relevant institutions
- Group discussions and workshops
- Policy making and presentation
- Exchange and Knowledge sharing with Japanese people
